FARMERS ORGANIZE TO SELL IN COMMON

SERVICE COMPANIES FORMED IN THREE COUNTIES OF OHIO

Report of Federation Says the Plan is to Establish Units Thruout the State Thru Which All Farm Products May be Sold—Investigation is Urged.

Progress is being made by Ohio farmers in their plan to establish units in every county thruout which all farm products may be cooperatively sold, it became known with the issuance of the annual report of the Ohio Farm Bureau federation.

This report now is being mailed to all members preparatory to the holding of the annual meeting of that organization in Columbus, February 2 and 3. The plan for building a co-operative business unit in every county first was proposed at a conference of farm bureau leaders of the state, who met in Columbus in midsummer.

"County service companies have been incorporated in Hardin, Clinton and Ashtabula counties," it is stated in the federation's report. "In other counties work is being done toward establishing service of a permanent nature."

Nothing will be done toward establishing a state finance corporation, outlined in the original plan, until more county units are established, say officers of the federation. The plan outlined is one which is expected to occupy a period of years before perfection.

"Many groups, such as fertilizer manufacturers, milk distributors, grain merchants and financial interests which formerly opposed very actively any organized effort on the part of farmers, now seek to affiliate with this movement, recognizing therein economies and justifying itself thru service," writes Executive Secretary Murray D. Lincoln in the federation's report in telling of its progress and that of affiliated cooperatives during the past year.

The year 1924, has seen the development of plans of livestock men toward the trucking and concentration of the live stock and cooperative sale directly to packers, according to those pages of the federation's report devoted to the development of affiliated cooperative groups. Live stock valued at approximately $12,000,000 has been sold thru these cooperatives during 1924.

Cooperative dairy marketing has been strengthened both in handling cream thru about 70 cooperative stations and group selling of fluid milk in territory surrounding nearly all the large cities.

Two new associations have started cooperative handling of farm products during the year, according to the report. One of these sold more than 2000 tons of cabbage out of the Lake Erie district and another reports 20,000,000 pounds of tobacco in the Miami Valley territory, most of which was sold during 1924.

Organization work conducted during the last year assured the starting of a cooperative selling agency for eggs and poultry during the first few months of this year, says the report. Fruit cooperatives have had considerable success in getting apples graded and packed according to quality of Ohio markets.

In suggesting plans for the coming year Secretary Lincoln urges a survey of consumption and food supply in Ohio, including its origin and the percentage of the supply that is, and can be, produced in Ohio, to forecast the production of farm products in the state. Investigation of taxation by farmers is also urged.

SILK MAID OF SEATTLE

Miss Alyse Berton of Seattle, Wash., draped in raw silk that is valued at $500. Seattle has become the most important silk port in the United States and during the past three years silk cargoes to the value of a half a billion dollars have come through that city.

British Passport Cost Cut to Nominal Fee

London.—The expenses and exasperations of postwar travel with passports are gradually being reduced for everybody except Americans.

Beginning December 1, British subjects for only 7s 6d, can obtain passports valid for five years from the date of issue.

No visas at all will be required for visiting most of the continental countries, to which the English go in large numbers. The Briton simply puts his $1.75 passport in his pocket and crosses the channel. For an extra 5s, he can have his passports extended to ten years.

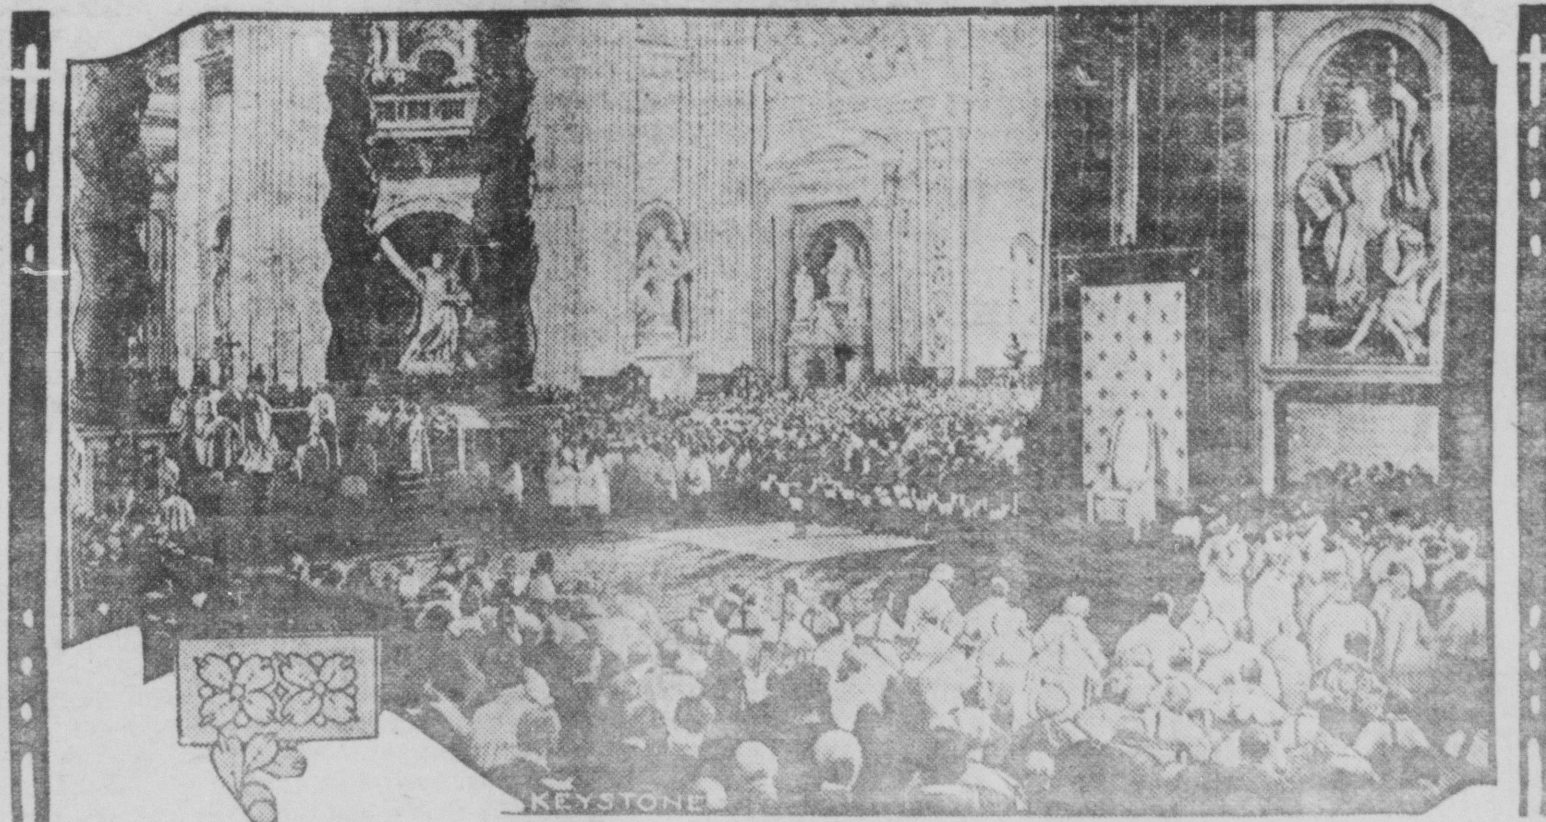

His lot is a lucky one compared to that of the American traveling abroad. First of all, the American must pay his own government $10 to get a passport which expires in 12 months and cannot be extended for a period longer than two years from the date of issue. Then for each country he visits, except Switzerland and Belgium, he must pay another $10 for a visa.

The American is merely an innocent bystander suffering from a little game of retaliation against his government.

When the United States began charging $10 for visas to visit America, foreign nations, instead of turning the other cheek, gave the Yankee wallet a wallop by charging Americans $10 each to cross their frequent frontiers.

As not infrequently happens, Europe comes out ahead in this little game.

TEMPERANCE WOMEN MET AT ATLANTA WITH MRS. HOSKINS

County President Lucy B. Price Gave Interesting Report of Jubilee Convention in Chicago Which Was Attended by Delegates From Every State in the Union as Well as the Two World Organizers.

A very interesting and successful all day meeting of the Atlanta Woman's Christian Temperance union was held at the pretty, comfortable home of Mr. and Mrs. William Hoskins, Wednesday, January 14.

The morning session opened at 10:45 o'clock. The president, Mrs. Hoskins, presided. Mrs. Mary Gray read the scripture lesson and led the devotions which was followed by the singing of "America." Mrs. Edith Cleary, the secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting. After the business and various discussion pertaining to the work, Mrs. Dunlap voiced the noontide prayer. A splendid dinner was served which was much enjoyed by all, as well as the delightful social time which prevailed during this highly interesting period.

The afternoon meeting was called to order at 2 o'clock by singing "The World is Going Dry." Miss Donna Bloomer presided at the piano and Mrs. Gale Cox had charge of the program. The 146th psalm was read in concert. Mrs. Cox read an article explaining that the program of the day was to celebrate the memorable day, January 16, when national constitutional prohibition went into effect.

This is one of the greatest days in the history of the nation, because it brought to us one of the greatest reforms of any age in any land. Some encouraging words were read from Prohibition Commissioner Haynes who said that over 90 per cent of the bootleg liquor is poisonous and was a contributing factor in bringing about victory and order over the outlawed liquor traffic. He says jail sentences are proving the real deterrents to law breaking; when the violator is put in jail, his activities are at an end, his income stops and he has an opportunity to reflect upon the importance of upholding the constitution.

Mrs. Lucy B. Price, county president gave a very highly interesting report of the Fiftieth Anniversary convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance union held in the large and beautiful Medinah Temple in the city of Chicago.

From this report we quote: "From the four quarters of the nation the delegates arrived at the railroad stations and were escorted to their various places of entertainment at the hotels in the city. The lobbies of the Hotel LaSalle, the convention headquarters, were filled with the leaders of the organization. Not only were these women from every state in the Union, but distant lands were well represented. The president of the India W. C. T. U., Mrs. F. B. Price, who had journeyed half way round the world to attend this jubilee convention; the two world organizers, Mrs. Flora E. Strout and Miss Christine I. Tingling, who very recently arrived in America after long terms of service in the Far East, were present. Miss Strout had as her parish; Burma, Ceylon and Malaya, preparing and organizing the way for anti-alcohol legislation.

"Miss Tingling has recently returned after several years in China, where she had the privilege of enlightening young men and women of the student class on scientific phases of the alcohol question. Another interesting figure at the convention was Mrs. Rachel Don, president of the New Zealand W. C. T. U. Among foreign delegates were also Miss Michi Senbongi, of Japan, who recently arrived from the Sunrise Kingdom; also Madam Laylah Baraket, of Mount Lebanon, Syria, who has for many years past kept the work alive and cared for the children and mothers of her native land.

"The widening horizon of the W. C. T. U. is golden with the rising, not the setting, sun. Still far in the distance gleams their goal—world prohibition, world purity, world peace.

"Chicago is known all over the nation as a convention city. Hardly a week passes that some great organization is not holding its annual gathering in this metropolis, but seldom does it have the privilege of being host to a real bonafide jubilee convention with fifty years of dramatic successful history as its background."

A rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Price for her excellent report which required an hour in delivery. The program closed with the W. C. T. U. benediction. Many pleasant memories will remain in the minds of all who had the pleasure of attending this interesting meeting of this large and flourishing union. Among the goodly number of visitors were Mrs. E. L. Price and Mrs. S. W. Dunlap, of Circleville.

Light From Trees

A French scientist has discovered a means of extracting and harnessing the electricity in trees. He connected a copper plate attached to a tree, and another plate buried in the earth, with a galvanometer, a delicate instrument which measures the strength of weak currents of electricity, and obtained a record of the current passing through the tree.

With three trees connected in the same way the power was increased, the experiment, with a like result, being continued until twenty trees were linked up in this fashion.

The scientist then placed two copper plates in the earth, about six feet apart, and with the current thus obtained lighted a small electric lamp.

Whether the idea can be extended to be commercially worth while has yet to be determined.

ENGINEER MURDERED BY BANDITS

Policeman Edward Lemon Wounded by Escaping Burglars at Hillsboro.

Hillsboro, Jan. 20:—(United Press) Hillsboro, the county seat of Highland county was thrown into a flutter of excitement at an early hour this morning when the store of the Hillsboro Hardware company was burglarized. The burglars were caught in the act by Edward "Rip" Lemon, a policeman. He called to his assistant, Harry McGill, aged 30, a deputy Highland county engineer. The latter was killed by one of the burglars and the policeman was wounded. The burglars escaped while they were being taken to jail. Just before the officers reached the jail with their prisoners the latter wrenched themselves free and began firing. McGill was shot thru the heart and dropped dead. Lemon, was wounded in the wrist and shoulder.

The bandits commanded a Hudson Super Six and escaped, going towards Cincinnati. Police guards were set on every highway leading into the last named city with orders to watch for the Hudson touring car in which the bandits fled. The license tag on the car is 302-805. The city of Hillsboro it is said offers a reward of $1,000 for the capture of the burglar-bandits.

The Hillsboro hardware store is owned by Richard Fairley & Sons, the same family owns the Circleville Hardware company, on North Court street, this city.

Messages describing the bandits and offering a reward was radiographed all over Ohio today at noon.

Watch Set in Its Ways

A watch that's dead set against daylight saving time is owned by Alexander Comeau, of Portland, Maine. Last spring Mr. Comeau set his timepiece an hour ahead. A few days later he was surprised to find that the hour hand on the watch had dropped back just one hour, to standard time. Again he set it ahead one hour. The faithful timepiece ran along this way for another few days and then went back to standard time. He made no further effort to tinker with the watch.—Boston Globe.

EMPLOYEES ARE GIVEN INCREASE.

Chicago, Jan. 19:—(United Press)—Eighty-seven thousand employees of 50 railroads today were granted wage increases of from one to two cents an hour by the United States Railroad labor board.

Application for similar increases for 75,000 other workers was denied. The wage increases total approximately $3,300,000 annually.

Classes of workers affected are clerks, freight handlers, express and station employees, janitors, elevator operators, truckers, stevedores and storemen.

In the Time of Trouble

Children and maids are frequently at a loss in an emergency and a directory hung over the telephone with the names, addresses and telephone numbers of the family physician and a substitute, the nearest fire box, the police station, the family pastor and the business places of all employed members of the family, will sometimes avert a tragedy.

Cleaning Aluminum.

Aluminum articles are very difficult to clean so that they will have a bright appearance. This is particularly the case with matted or frosted ware. To restore the pieces to brilliancy, you should place them for some time in water that has been slightly acidulated with sulphuric acid.

Like Papa.

The family was at breakfast, and among other things they had hard-boiled eggs. The bald-headed papa turned to his two-year-old child and said: "Elizabeth, how do you wish your egg this morning?" She looked at the egg and then at her father and said: "I des I'll take it bald-headed, papa."

Still Unsolved

The sport desk telephone rang. "Say, listen," said an anxious voice. "Did John L. Sullivan ever whip a man whose name was in four letters and ended in A?" "I guess he did if he fought him," replied the office boy. But the puzzle went unsolved.

Work for Increase of Reindeer Herds

Agricultural Department Is Conducting Investigation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Although only about ninety tons of reindeer meat were shipped from Alaska to this country in 1923, indications on July 1, 1924, were that there would soon be a rapid increase in the quantity shipped. In 1923 the entire number of reindeer in the territory totaled about 241,000, according to estimates made in 66 herds. The increase in the number of reindeer in Alaska each year runs from 33 to 45 per cent of the total number of animals in the herd. This percentage can be raised by a better understanding of herd management on the part of the Eskimos and other owners, and better business methods in marketing the meat will result in a higher output. The biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture conducts important investigation work in Alaska in the interests of the reindeer industry, including studies of diseases and parasites, feeding experiments to determine the nutritive values of different types of native forage, poison-plant problems, herd management, and breed improvement.

Through the establishment of corrals, herd owners are improving conditions in their herds. Co-operative handling and management of some of the herds has been practiced with good results. An additional impetus has been given to the industry by two American companies which are now operating refrigerating plants to receive reindeer carcasses for the purpose of shipping them to markets in the United States through Seattle. One of these companies operates refrigerating barges which can move from one point to another, mainly in the rivers, and the other company has several small cold-storage plants along the coast.

How Producer Can Get

More Than Market Price

Start today! Now is the time to start making a market for your products. Start by getting individual customers to buy your products and build up a trade that will last. You may not think that this can be done, but others have done it and there is no reason why you cannot. Put day-old eggs on the market in individual packages. Soon you will see that everybody will want your eggs, and then, when the demand is great enough, your price will also go higher. You cannot expect more than the market price unless you do create this demand for your eggs, thinks D. H. Hall, extension poultry husbandman at Clemson college.

When eggs are 60 cents per dozen, Mr. Hall adds, we never receive calls to find a market—but when they are 25 and 30 cents—we are always called upon to find markets. The law of supply and demand governs the market to a certain extent, but when a person has his own individual market already established he need not worry about a flooded or low market.

Dairy Calves Do Well

on Dried Milk Ration

"Raising the Dairy Calf When Whole Milk Is Sold" is the title of Bulletin 215, which was prepared from studies at the University of Minnesota agricultural experiment station, by Dr. C. H. Eckles and T. W. Gullickson of the division of dairy husbandry. Two plans of experiments were adopted, the first to raise calves on the minimum amount of whole milk or skim milk and the second to raise calves on dried milk, using powdered skim milk, powdered or semi-solid buttermilk, or malted milk. The results clearly showed that good calves can be raised on a very small amount of whole milk and that the manufactured material mentioned can be substituted after the calf has got a start. All the calves used in the experiment were never off feed and were kept unusually free from sickness or digestive troubles.

Dairymen everywhere will be interested in the findings reported in this new bulletin. Copies may be had by addressing the Division of Publications, University Farm, St. Paul.

FARM FACTS

The best corn in 1924 was on fall plowing.

Seed properly selected is good corn insurance.

Nix on the burning of leaves; save them for the hungry soil.

Is farm labor scarce? The hogs will harvest your corn and pay you for the privilege.

Don't forget that the poultry needs green feed all winter long, caution poultry workers.

No, time isn't much to a hog, but a warm, dry place in the winter is, and he'll gain faster for it.

A cow in these good days must be more than just a cow; she must be a proved and profitable producer.

Old-Fashioned Home Had Good Qualities

Talking to the New Jersey Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers' association at Atlantic City, Miss A. L. Mariatt, director of home economics of the University of Wisconsin, said that the old-fashioned home, with the family grouped together in harmonious assemblage and not as a "scientific sanitary machine," was better than any modern school for training children.

Belag, presumably, herself a teacher of what is called in educational vernacular "domestic science," Miss Mariatt's opinion is testimony to the influence of the home upon family life that can fairly be called "expert." If a woman who is immersed in the "scientific" atmosphere feels that way about the home, it must be that those persons who still believe that the place of family habitation should be something more than a lodging house, a "filling station," as another advocate of the home called modern apartment house life, cannot be so far wrong.

One of the dictionary definitions of the word "home" is "The abiding place of the affections, especially of the domestic affections." Passing over all that could be said of the home as a place for training for children in the principles which make for good men and women and good citizens, those of the younger generation who find pleasure only away from the family circle might be asked to give a moment's thought to the affection that is theirs in the spot from which they so often hasten.

Those friends who share their pleasures, will any one of them give them the unselfish love and devotion they receive at home? Will any one of their friends be interested enough in them to point out their errors and blunders to them, that they may be saved from sorrow and suffering, possibly from disgrace? Will any one of them defy themselves anything?

The best friends of any boy or girl are to be found at home.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Houses for Workers

A report by the British ministry of health for the year ended in March shows the effect of the housing act of 1923, under which provision is made for public assistance in the construction of houses for workers. There were 41,850 houses to be provided under approved schemes by local authorities, 73,777 houses by private enterprise having assistance under the act and 5,681 by public utility societies similarly assisted, making a total of 121,317. Of these 8,140 were completed and 30,405 were in course of construction at the close of the year. On the same date 208,712 houses had been completed under the housing acts of 1919; 164,985 by local authorities, 39,186 by private builders, and 4,541 by public utility societies.

Her First Thought

Recently a teacher of a civics class prevailed on Lieut. Cliff Richter to show the class through the police station, then take the group through the city prison. As they went trooping from one point of interest to another, the lieutenant acting as guide, in true guide fashion told them about the things he thought they should know in connection with the trip.

He felt that he had carried it off well and had really given them something to remember. Wishing to see how well they had learned their lesson, the lieutenant, pointing to one bright-appearing girl, said:

"Now, little girl, what did you get out of this trip?"

"I got out of English today," she promptly replied.—Indianapolis News.

'Twast Her Name

The woman had just won the decision in her divorce case. Then she asked that her maiden name be restored.

"And what is your maiden name, madam?" the dignified judge inquired.

"Guess," she replied. Somewhat taken aback, the judge cleared his throat, grasped his gavel and asked again, and got the same answer.

Rising to his feet and leaning across the desk, he shook the gavel in the woman's face. "Madam, this is no guessing contest," he said. "Another flippant remark, and you will be guilty of contempt."

"But that's my name—Susie Guess," the woman replied meekly.—Exchange.

Almanac Season

"I've brung home a couple of omenicks for you," said Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge upon returning from the county seat, flinging them into his wife's lap.

"Aw shucks!" returned Mrs. Johnson. "Omenicks are all alike these days and none of 'em much account."

"Well, I read considerable in 'em as I came rotating along, and both of 'em are all right. The green one has got the best weather in it, but the folks in the yellor one were cured of the most horrible diseases."—Kansas City Star.

Got Pup Out of Well

Patrolman Lavelle of Carrick, Pa., was stuck when he was called to assist in the rescue of a pet dog that had fallen into an abandoned well. A rope and a basket were suggested and tried but the pup wouldn't fall for the basket, keeping on swimming. But a bit of meat hung dexterously over the floating basket finally tempted him in and back to his tearful master.

Spoilage of Food Due to Lack of Proper Care

Vegetables and fruits give up their water when exposed to dry heat, and in moist heat they decay, writes Helen Harrington Downing, on "Saving at Home." Heat, food and moisture are ideal living conditions for the organisms which cause decay. Sanitary conditions and proper temperature prevent spoilage.

On the grocer's shelf certain foods spoil because the package is not airtight. The air and moisture penetrate the package and attack the contents, the food rapidly deteriorates. Fruits develop molds; cereals and flour acquire weevils; coffee and tea lose strength; sugar and salt become lumpy.

The greatest loss from spoilage in the store comes from perishable and bulk foods. The package foods, if properly sealed, only need to be stored in a moderate temperature to insure "keeping," but the bulk food is exposed to the air, damp, dust, human hands, and often such pests as mice and cockroaches, as well.

In the home spoilage is due in a large measure to lack of proper care of the food products which are delivered in good condition.

Quality canned foods stored in a cool room will, of course, keep indefinitely. Always empty contents of the can as soon as you open it. Empty into glass or china dish or granite sauce pan as soon as you open it. The action of the air on food improves the flavor.

Butter, milk and salad vegetables should be put into the refrigerator immediately; exposure to heat and moisture causes rapid deterioration of such products.

Most Attractive Togs for Girls of All Ages

With her straight little frock of gay plaid, her smart little boyish coat of homespun with its hat to match and her high-rolled stockings of wool, worn with low-heeled oxfords or shoes with a single strap, the very young person of today is a most engaging little figure.

Simplicity is the keynote of youth and fashions, but it is astonishing how varied in style are juvenile modes and how well adapted to each type of childhood. No longer are frocks designed simply for the three-year-old or the six-year-old or the more advanced age of ten or twelve. Not only are the years of the wearer taken into consideration, but every effort is made to provide models that are suited to each type.

This season one notices a revival of the eton or bolero jacket, a fashion always becoming to youth and one that gains in attractiveness in its latest interpretation. One of the prettiest frocks to exploit the bolero is made of brown and tan plaid, with a blouse of cream-color crepe de chine.

For a younger child nothing could be more charming than little smocks made of bengaline, which comes in a wide range of exquisite colors. One of the most attractive is of turquoise blue bengaline with a narrow collar of coral velvet. The raglan sleeves are short and gathered into a cuff of velvet.

Triple Strands of Pearls

No costume is complete without its string of pearls, and the fashion of wearing two and three strings of different colors and sizes is becoming more and more popular. Especially attractive are triple strings fastened with a single clasp. These consist of two strings of white pearls and one of gunmetal.

HARTMAN THEATER

Immediately following her very successful season in New York in the same play, Arthur Hopkins will present Ethel Barrymore at the Hartman theater, Columbus, for three days beginning next Monday, January 19, in Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's masterpiece, "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." Miss Barrymore's many friends will be keenly interested in her appearance and the role of Paula that she has in this new play is another portrait to add to the many she has already portrayed.

The role of Paula in this famous play is said to crown Miss Barrymore's success as a star. The play has been staged by Mr. Hopkins himself and has been given unusual settings and scenes. Miss Barrymore is supported by a cast of equal caliber, which includes Henry Daniell, Lionel Pape, J. Colvin Dunn and Margot Kelly. There will be a matinee Wednesday.

The last half of next week starting Thursday, January 22, thru Saturday, will bring another celebrated star to the Hartman theater—Jane Cowl in "Romeo and Juliet" and in "The Depths" a new play by Dr. Hane Mueller. Miss Cowl will be seen in "Romeo and Juliet," in which she has created such a sensation all over the country, on Thursday and Friday nights and on Saturday afternoon and in "The Depths" on Saturday night. With her will be seen Rollo Peters, as "Romeo" and also with her in "The Depths" besides a supporting cast that has been with her constantly for years. Mr. Peters is one of the best actors of the present day.

There has been an unusually heavy advance sale for both of these stars. It would be advisable to secure seats soon. There will be a Wednesday matinee of Barrymore and a Saturday matinee of Cowl in "Romeo and Juliet."

HOUSE WILL VOTE

JANUARY 27TH ON CHILD LABOR ACT

To Limit Sale of Jamaica Ginger
To Groceries and Drug Stores
May Be Offered.

Tuesday, January the 27th has been selected for the vote on the child labor amendment in the house of representatives. If the measure is defeated, it will not be taken up in the senate. Generally speaking, business interests and farmers have opposed the amendment and labor organizations and women's clubs have favored it. A lively fight is expected this week on the Collier amendment to the Freeman-Collier bus law. Advocates of the amendment say it means home rule over city bus lines, but bus owners declared that it would put many of them out of business. It is said that if the amendment is adopted a bus owner will be compelled to obtain a permit in every municipality through which his buses travel and will be forced to abide by regulations set up in each municipality no matter how conflicting they may be. Enactment of a gasoline tax was advocated by the State Tax Association at its meeting last week.

Senator Bender of Cleveland, has introduced several bills to aid in the enforcement of prohibition laws. It is understood a bill also will be introduced preventing the sale of Jamaica ginger in pool rooms, ice cream parlors, shoe shining shops and other places and limiting its sale entirely to bonafide groceries and drug stores.

Full Military Honors
at Squaw Man's Burial

Sam Terry, beloved "Siksela" and squaw man of the Sioux, lies buried in the Rosebud Indian reservation in St. Francis, S. D. Full military honors were accorded the old United States scout and former Indian fighter by the American Legion as his body was lowered to its last resting place.

Samuel Mark Terry, nephew of General Terry of Civil war and Indian war fame, was born in New York September 1, 1830. Sam joined the United States army in 1858 and a gunshot wound received in the Civil war caused him to wear a silver plate in his throat for the rest of his life.

Handicapped by the wound and undaunted by loss of his toes by freezing while he was engaged in army messenger and scout work for Uncle Sam around the army posts in the land of the Sioux Indians, Sam Terry continued in the government service until romance conquered him.

His detachment was about to attack an Indian village in 1867, with orders to kill every man. During the fighting figures were seen hiding in the tall grass. One of the soldiers was about to shoot when Sam ordered him to wait. Search of the grass revealed two Indian girls. After the attack, one of these persisted in pursuing Terry until he became a squaw man and a real lover of the Indians.

Old-timers declare Sam Terry was a noble character. He served his country for 23 years, and after his adoption by the Indians he helped bring about a mutual understanding between them and Washington.

Where the Hairpins Go

There is a very charming fairy story written concerning the land where all lost points go, says the St. Joseph News-Press. So completely do vast quantities of pins disappear from human sight that it seems there must be some magic in their vanishment. But the pretty fairy story is far from the sordid reality of the discovery, the other day, of many of the lost pins, especially hairpins. When sheriffs raided squatters who were occupying shacks on the Chicago dump, a pile of thirty tons of wire articles, mostly hairpins, was discovered.

The discarded hairpins covered a space fifty feet square and the pile was four feet deep. Evidently girls and women who bobbed their hair had thrown away their collection of hairpins and those who profit from sorting trash had assembled the remarkable collection. Freedom from the thralldom of pins sticking into or pressing their heads is said to be one of the great advantages of women's shorn locks, though facetious men have complained that the loss of this household article means the deprivation of handy nutpicks and of a wire to hold damaged gulluses. Yet their alleged consternation is nothing in comparison with the plight of hairpin manufacturers.

Meaning of "Alabama"

It has long been a matter of tradition that the name "Alabama" had the romantic meaning of "Here We Rest." This originated about seventy-five years ago and gained widespread popularity through the writings of Judge Meek, who handled the history of the state in a volume which was very generally accepted. Some recent philological research has upset this. Rev. Allen Wright, a highly educated Choctaw, says that it means "thicket clearers." That was originally the name of a tribe of Indians which inhabited that part of the country and the name was always given to the river and afterwards to the state. In his opinion the word is compounded from "Alba," meaning a thicket or mass of vegetation, and "amo," to clear or gather up. Another student of tribal dialects concurs in this belief, with the slightly different definition of "vegetation gatherers."

Man Before Radio

Edgar A. DeForest, the radio inventor, said at a Minneapolis reception:

"Radio is so wonderful that the average man feels before it like the farmer at the seaside.

"A farmer on his first visit to the seashore went down to the beach at low tide and saw a big fishing smack lying high and dry on the sand.

"Hey, mister," he said to a fisherman, 'how do you get that big boat down to the water?'

"We don't take the boat down to the water, shipmate," said the fisherman, with a smile. 'The water comes up to the boat.'

"The farmer laughed.

"Yes, mister," he said, 'I know I'm from the country, all right, all right, but you needn't think I'm goin' to swaller that.'

Power

"I can turn you out a statue," declared a booster. "I can turn you out a painting or novel. I can turn you out a song."

"With all that," commented a bystander, "you ain't nearly so powerful as that little fellow over yonder."

"Who is he?"

"He's a landlord. He can turn you out,"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Preparedness

Reggie—Phyllis said that she was going to let me give her swimming lessons. We start with them tomorrow.

Archle—You lucky dog. But where are you going in such a hurry tonight?

Reggie—Be prepared is my motto. I'm going to learn to swim.

LEGION

(Copy for this Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service)

"FIGHTING JOE" IS NATIONAL CHAPLAIN

"Fighting Joe" is the title which has been bestowed by general consent on Rev. Joseph Lonergan of Durand, Ill., recently elected national chaplain of the American Legion. And the title is not airy tinsel, either. It has a background.

For it harks back to kid days when as a boy with two fists who knew how to use them and Father Joe sometimes found employment for them in ways other than earning money by working on railroad tracks to go to college. The story goes back to the time when he was a famous football star, "the miracle halfback" at St. Viator's college.

The nickname recalls a baseball career culminating in a batting average for his last year of .448, rather a big league average. It carries a picture of Father Joe, the ecclesiastical student at Montreal, tying up his priestly soutane above his knees and sliding bases like Ty Cobb. It is reminiscent of the young priest at Aurora, Ill., who appeared in the pulpit one day with a bulging black eye—fruit of too strenuous endeavors to show his eighth-graders in the school league he organized how to take 'em hot off the bat.

Then comes the time when Father Joe took up his work with the Eighty-sixth division organizing at Camp Grant. He was without military status and without salary, but he carried on. While there he lectured to all officers at Camp Grant on the necessity of religion. Shortly afterward he got a commission as first lieutenant chaplain, and began his extraordinary activity in the fighting game. It was he who spoke at Camp Grant's greatest day, July 4, 1918, when he addressed 50,000 of the division gathered there. A sentence stood out, which was flashed over the country: "A man never became a man until he got a good punch on the nose."

Then the Argonne and the Vosges. Father Joe says that when the shooting was close he became Dugout Joe, but the boys don't say that. They think he's all man. The chaplain reorganized a band for the Twelfth engineers, "the band with a personality," chosen by the French mission to accompany them when they took over Alsace and Strassburg from the Germans. He was transferred to the Ninetieth division and remained with them until he was discharged. Membership in the American Legion followed soon and then his election as department chaplain for Illinois in 1922. In 1924 he was unanimously named national chaplain. That's the story of "Fighting Joe" Lonergan, whose record at the front with the men endeared him to all veterans and makes him a very popular "padre."

Legion Posts Aim to Cut Down Fire Loss

"The source of America's largest and most preventable waste is fires, and American Legion posts and departments throughout the country are taking up the problem with an aim to appreciably cut down the loss annually of millions of dollars from fire," declared Legionnaire J. H. Dulaney. He and W. S. Atkinson are heading the department of Oklahoma's move for fire prevention. Both are leaders in the Oklahoma Fire Prevention association. The American Legion, department of California, has been active in fire prevention in the redwood forests on the coast the past year.

Prize for Student

It's time to reward the studious lad with the bulging cerebrum, as well as the campus hero of bulging biceps, decided the A. A. Mountain post of the American Legion of McMechen, W. Va. Accordingly, they offered a substantial cash prize to the high school student whose scholarship record is best during the year.

Called for Rest.

(United Press.)

Bellaire, O., Jan. 19:—Sam Reed shot his wife, Florence, today and the coroner's autopsy revealed her to be a fully developed man. Both are colored.

Police are unable to explain the strange affair. The couple were married two months ago and owned a small home in the negro section.

Reed fled after the shooting and is still at large. Neighbors said the couple often quarreled about money but otherwise seemed perfectly happy.

Toledo, Jan. 19:—Mrs. Joseph O'Brien, 29, is near death from exposure. Police found her prostrate on the grave of her 5 year old daughter, Marian, killed more than a month ago in Wyandotte, Michigan, interurban car crash. She lay in the windswept cemetery for four hours trying to cover the little grave with her body.

Columbus, O., Jan. 19—The Toledo-Fostoria and Findlay Railway Co., today entered protest with the public utilities commission to the petition for an extension of certificate for the Cleveland-Lorain-Sandusky Bus Co.

The protest covered operation of the bus line from Sandusky to Lima where the railway company declares, it served the public adequately and has spent large sums of money increasing facilities.

Dayton, O., Jan. 19—Clarence Brown was killed and six persons were seriously injured when the auto crashed into an interurban car at grade crossing near Caboree today.

First reports from the scene of the accident said Brown, his baby and Harvey Thompson had been killed.

Columbus, O., Jan. 20—Columbus and central Ohio trudged and plowed its way to work this morning thru the heaviest snow of the winter.

Beginning early last night with a sprinkling of sleet which in a few hours turned to large wet flakes the snow continued thruout the night. It slackened at daybreak.

Findlay, O., Jan. 20—Findlay shovelled out from under a four inch blanket of snow this morning, the heaviest of the season, with very little inconvenience experienced. Interurban and steam lines were able to continue operating but a few minutes behind schedule.

Marion, O., Jan. 20—The heaviest snowfall in years struck Marion during the night, crippling interurban and street car traffic and inconveniencing pedestrians.

Official observers said that one foot of snow had fallen at dawn. Because of insufficient funds the city was unable to operate its motor driven snow plow.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 20—A five inch blanket of snow covered Cleveland today seriously hampering traffic.

Lorain, Ohio, Jan. 20—Lorain was blanketed under six inches of snow and a modern temperature today, the heaviest snowfall this winter.

'MA' FERGUSON IS GOVERNOR OF TEXAS

Assumes the Office of Chief Executive of the Largest State in Union.

Austin, Texas, Jan. 20—(United Press)—In ancient days all roads led to Rome as the center of civilization. Today Texas laid down its bid for a high place in the realm of political advancement by twining the laurel of governorship upon the brow of "Ma" Ferguson.

Shortly after noon today Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson will take the oath of office which will make her the executive director of five million persons and the largest state in the Union.

Ascension to office will officially record a "come back" in political achievement and one of the few written into American annals. As governor of Texas with its pages of history filled with glorious deeds and marred by others of turbulence, "Ma" Ferguson's life during the last decade shows a counterpart in triumph and adversity. As the wife of an impeached executive, she walked out of the capitol with downcast eyes less than ten years ago.

Chosen governor upon a platform of tolerance and a plea for family vindication, she reentered the state house today to claim her reward in the presence of thousands of visitors.

Housing facilities were at a premium and many persons dozed thruout the night bundled in their automobiles for lack of better accommodations.

Before dawn hundreds tramped up Capitol Hill and sought the warmth of the building where they stood jammed before the doors of the inaugural hall. Seating facilities in the house of representatives were limited and thousands faced the prospect of a long vigil in the open air.

The inaugural visitors were a cosmopolitan group in which the broadcloth of the city resident rubbed uncomplainingly against the more serviceable gear of the out-of-door man. Bankers and day laborers were in the throng for the woman governor issued an open invitation to the state to attend her inaugural.

Curiosity drew thousands but there were others who came to renew old acquaintanceships. Those who knew the Fergusons when it was "Gov. Jim" and Mrs. Ferguson were on hand to welcome "her excellency" the governor of Texas and "Jim" the chore boy of her administration by his own admission.

The "first lady of the state," Dorace, 20 year old daughter of the governor, took equal rank with her mother. It is Dorace who will preside over the social functions of the executive mansion. The inaugural visitors will have their first real opportunity to meet the woman governor at tonight's reception. Mrs. Ferguson will head the receiving line in the senate chamber. Former Governors Ferguson and Neff, heads of the houses of the legislature departmental chiefs and other officials will constitute the reception committee.

The inaugural ball which will follow the reception scheduled to start at 8 p. m. will make the revival of dancing as a part of inaugural program discontinued during the two administrations of Governor Neff. Objection to dancing on the program led to the refusal of Governor Neff to head the grand march with Mrs. Ferguson at the opening of the ball.

Mrs. Ferguson will lead the march with her husband in the senate chamber setting in motion the closing number of the day's program.

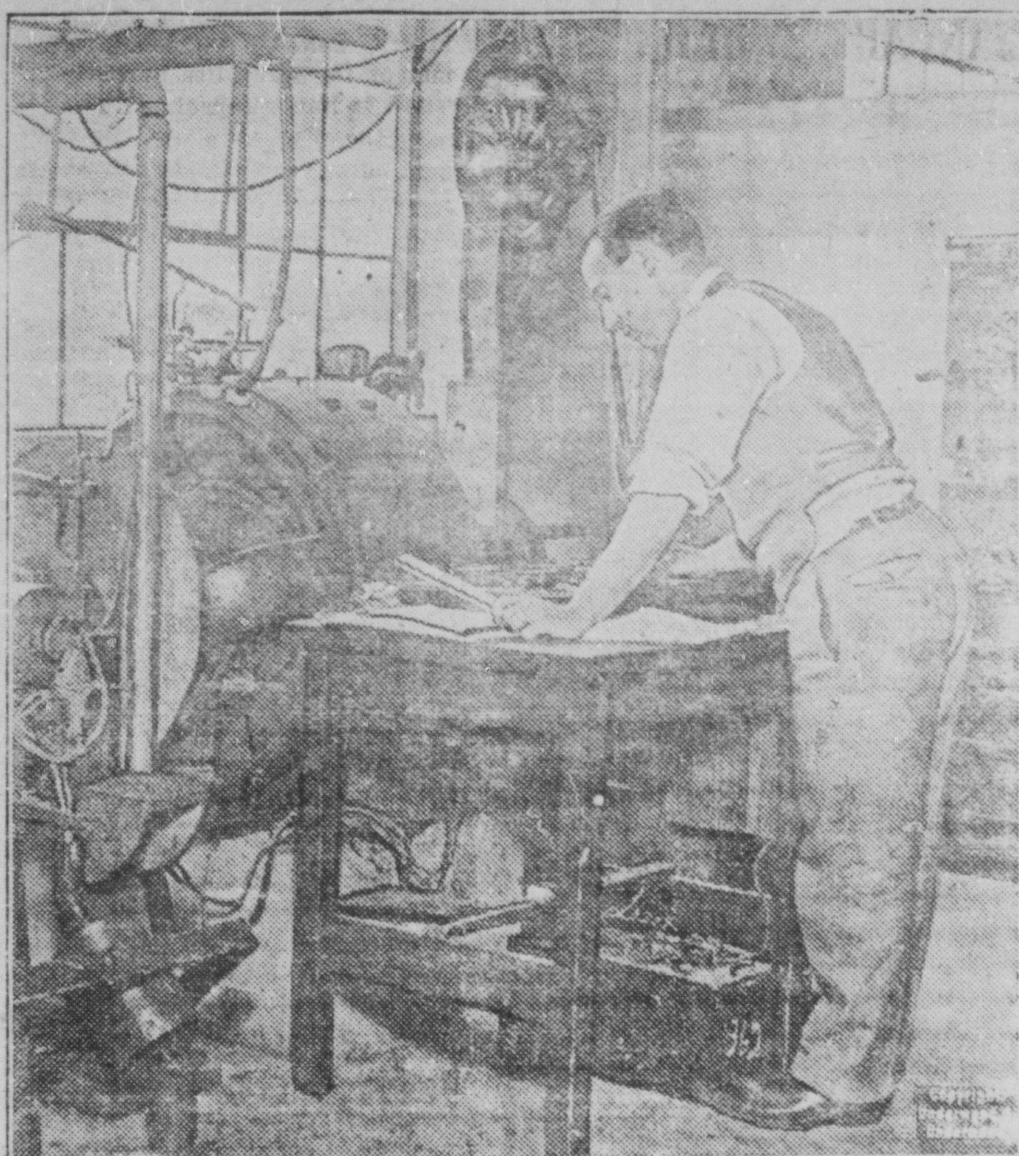

Ballrooms of two downtown hotels and the senate chamber were cleared away for the benefit of the dancers when the "Old Gray Mare" band of Brownwood and a half dozen other groups of music makers got under way. After heading the grand march upon the respective dance floors, Mrs. Ferguson and the official party will return to the house chamber for the informal welcome of any visitors.

ERWIN GREER IS FINED FOR SPEED

Automobile Expert Tells Others to Drive Car Slowly.

(By ERWIN GREER, President Greer College of Automotive Engineering, Chicago.)

You who read this little column of mine think that the fellow who writes it is a pretty wise bird. But did you ever wonder why I am able to write so wisely? Well, this particular article cost me over $55 but you get it for nothing.

Two months ago I bought a straight eight, guaranteed to turn up nearly 100 miles an hour. After breaking it in, running around 25 miles an hour for 1,000 miles—as every good motorist does—I decided to take friend wife on a trip through the country. And when we came to a long stretch of macadam I sampled my bus to see what speed it really could turn up. Yes, the car was as fast as the manufacturers claimed. The motorcycle cop who arrested me proved it to the judge.

The judge—an old but experienced motorist—welcomed me with open arms, and his advice ran thusly:

"Your first duty is to impress upon the public the fact that you have a new car. Always drive it as fast as it will go. This gives people the impression you could easily win a race. When turning a corner always do it on two wheels. Everyone loves to be thrilled. Don't push the horn button until you are in the midst of a crowd. It is great sport to see people knock each other down in their haste to keep from being run over. Besides, it makes you as welcome as a mad dog.

"If you desire excitement, try beating a train to a crossing, or run your car into a tree. This will bring you newspaper headlines and it is quite possible that some movie company will offer you a big salary for becoming a stunt man. Always vary your antics. To keep people guessing is the spice of life.

"Fifty dollars and costs! Now get out of here. If I ever catch you speeding again in this county I'll send you up for life!"

And my poor wife drove poor trembling me home with remarks that would shrivel a sheet of steel. "Now I don't get that new hat I wanted. You an automotive expert, bah! You ought to be engineer of a peanut stand. If you ever speed again I'll tell every automobile editor in the country and then your reputation won't be worth a wooden nickel. Hereafter, you drive to the office via the elevated."

And so, reader, you see by the foregoing that even I—who you think knows all about automobiles—am only a human being after all. Did I tell that judge my right name? I did not! I'd have been given ten years if he knew who I was.

Be satisfied to ride slowly, using all possible forethought and consideration. Don't speed when you come to a straight stretch. You might meet the same judge that I did—and hear him say: "Fifty dollars and costs!"

Cost of Car Operation

The cost of operating an automobile is one of the greatest items in the auto owner's budget and one that is the most watched. A car that burns the least fuel is the most popular car in most cases, and it is the only car for the person with a small amount of money to spend for his pleasure. When purchasing a car this side of the question should be kept in mind by the purchaser and the car best fitted to his pocketbook should be the one purchased. The initial cost will be near as great as the continued cost of operation.

Motor Car Is Fine Piece of Machinery

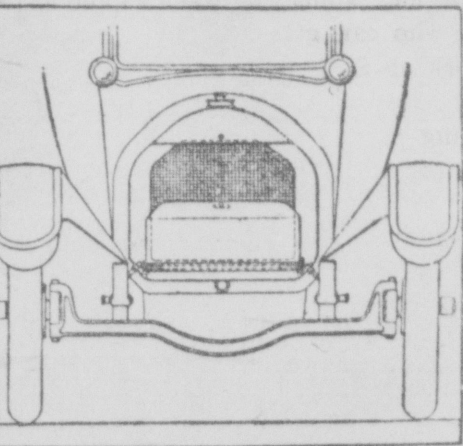

"One trouble with the average motor car owner," says the manager of an automobile service company, "is that he fails to realize that the automobile is a piece of very fine machinery, and that it will render service in proportion to the attention it receives. It is not human, and will not cry out when abused.

"When it becomes necessary, through accident, neglect, abuse, or other cause to make a change, one should seek the advice and services of the dealer from whom he has bought the car. This dealer has the interest of the car at heart more than any other person in the trade. But if distance makes the dealer unavailable, it is cheaper in the end to employ the best mechanic."

Cover for Radiator Is Handy in Cold Weather

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing a radiator cover, the invention of F. M. Cockrell and J. M. Rockwell of Liberty, Mo. says:

This invention relates to a protective cover for radiators of automobiles, whereby to conserve the heat thereof in cold weather and to aid in maintaining the water at the proper temperature. More particularly the invention relates to a curtain arranged to wind upon or be unwound from a spring roller, the curtain being adapted to close to any desired extent a front opening formed in the cover.

Hints Worth Remembering in Care of Motorcars

See that your springs are well lubricated, both at the shackles and at the leaves. Apply penetrating graphite spring oil to the leaves. If the shackle bolts are worn, have them replaced before you start.

Inspect your steering gear mechanism. See that the tie-rod is tight, and that the steering knuckle is working properly. If anything is loose have it tightened by all means. Keep your steering mechanism well lubricated.

If your motor has a leather-faced clutch apply neatsfoot oil. A few drops of the oil on your brake bands will help them wonderfully.

If you are touring in an open car, see that your curtains are readily accessible and in good shape. When dismantling the steering gear, it is important to take out all the control tubes and to remove all rust that has accumulated between them.

Always apply the brakes and then release them, instead of putting them on and then holding them there.

When the tires wear unevenly or so thin that the remaining rubber is not enough to absorb the ordinary shocks of travel, the wheel bearings are very likely to be broken.

When installing a fan belt, always see that the pulleys are in line.

AMUSEMENTS

If you were asked to sum up in one sentence our impression of "Unguarded Women," the Alan Crosland Paramount production that opened at the Met theater last night for a two days run, we would say that "It glows with the divine spark of life!" It has that intangible something that grips the heart and stirs the imagination because its appeal is to the fundamental emotions of mankind.

All the highlights of the dramatic story which Lucy Stone Terrill wrote and which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post under the title, "Face" are emphasized in the screenplay.

Richard Dix, as the hero, imparts a naturalness and sincerity to his role that is bound to add thousands to the countless other thousands of his admirers; Bebe Daniels gives a vivid portrayal of the reckless widow; and Mary Astor plays her part of the loyal fiancée with all the winsomeness of her appealing personality. Honorable mention must also be made of Walter McGrail, Frank Losee, Harry Mestayer and Joe King, each of whom gives a sterling performance.

Linen Defies Time

"A piece of linen, sent to our research department recently from London, though 6,000 years old, was found to be as perfect structurally as the linens we are making today." This was the statement made by W. H. Webb, the chairman of the Irish Linen society, recently, at Oxford, England, and he explained it on the grounds that germs of decay would have nothing to do with linen. Similarly, he said, the windings found in 1881 on the mummy of Rameses II, who oppressed the Israelites in the time of Moses, were still perfect.

Good Campaign Story

Just before an election, says Pathfinder Magazine, there was a small group of ready talkers making a lot of noise. One fellow said it reminded him of the farmer who told a restaurant man he was going to drain his frog pond and would gladly sell him a carload of frogs. One day the farmer came in with a market basket full of frogs. The restaurant man said: "Where are the rest of them?"

The farmer said: "This is all I could find. But they made so much noise I was sure there must be a carload."

Proper Diet for Fly

Are you feeding your house flies properly? These delicate creatures, so charming and desirable about the home, can't be happy and healthy on just "any old thing" you leave about for them, says the Kansas City Star.

In the Journal of Experimental Zoology R. W. Glaser tells of a series of experiments to discover just what sort of food is suitable for them. The housewife will appreciate the information.

On an exclusively protein diet they live from one to eight days. Eating only sugar the life period is longer, but no eggs are laid—no baby flies to gladden the home.

Mr. Glaser reached the conclusion that the very best food is sugar and some form of starch that can be eaten and assimilated. On such a diet they thrive, live long and lay plenty of eggs. The average life of the house fly is only about twenty days. In general, female flies live longer than males.

Record for Bad English

The record for bad English is still held by a man who was not long ago a governor of one of our large states. He performed the unusual feat of making three grammatical errors in a sentence composed of two words: "Them's them!"—Scribner's Magazine.

KEEPING WELLARE RIPE OLIVES DANGEROUS?

DR. FREDERICK R. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

THREE outbreaks of botulism poisoning from canned ripe olives occurred in 1924. The reports of these cases in the newspapers have again aroused doubt in the public mind. Are ripe olives a dangerous food?

A series of cases of botulism during 1919 and 1920 had a marked effect on the purchase and consumption of ripe olives. The California fruit and vegetable growers and canners did everything in their power to improve and safeguard their goods. They asked the help of the state and national health authorities. They spent large sums for experts. They improved their methods of canning. They did every thing possible to reassure the public. With the reassurance, millions of cans of ripe olives have been purchased and eaten. Three cases of poisoning in a year is, of course, a very small number. But what the individual purchaser and housewife wants to know is: "How can I know that I am not going to get one of these three deadly cans?"

To answer this question, the bureau of chemistry of the Department of Agriculture has made a second survey, which has just been reported in the December issue of the American Journal of Public Health. Nearly 3,000 sample cans of olives put up by 20 packers from 30 states were examined.

Spoiled or suspicious cans were not confined to any particular packer or to any special locality. Spoiled samples included those whose contents were off color or had a suspicious smell, where the olives were soft or the liquid colored. In some cases, the cans were rusty or corroded inside, bulged or contained gas. Some of these cans had remained on the dealers' shelves for several years.

Summing up their findings the government experts say that canned ripe olives that are free from odor, softening or discoloration, and where the cans are not bulged out, are not dangerous.

Don't buy any canned ripe olives unless the year of packing is marked on the can. If the olives are soft, discolored or have a suspicious odor, throw them out. Don't take any chances.

Young Husband ComesForward With Advice

One year after marriage is the moment when a man can talk the soundest sense on the vital subject of marriage. Before that he does not know enough. Afterwards he may know too much and be unable to see the wood for the trees, "A Happy Husband" writes in the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

When I went to the altar last September it was with the old adage for the proper handling of matrimonial quarrels—"When you are in the wrong apologize. When you are in the right apologize twice!"—ringing in my ears. It was good advice and I have never regretted following it.

Women are great hands at giving new lamps for old. Make little sacrifices for them, and they will make big ones for you. "Remember a wife's birthday. It has been wittily said, "and the remaining 364 days of the year will look after themselves."

Considering how careful women are to study our little ways and peculiarities, it seems a pity we do not take more trouble to study theirs. They are really so ridiculously easy to manage, if we only knew it. They do not alter with the ages except on the surface.

The woman of today prizes most the same qualities as the woman of 1924 B. C. did before her—chivalrous instincts, first overtures to reconciliation, the ready shouldering of responsibility and blame. They may not comment on these things at the time, but they will remember them, and the reward will be a hundredfold.

When you shut your mouth tight and smother the clever retort which springs to mind, they know they have got a man. Sometimes they will deliberately do things to test a husband. Lucky the man who successfully survives that test. It is on him, and on him alone, that the uttermost treasures of a woman's soul will one day be lavished.

Miss Edith Smith of New York city reported to the Paris police that she had been robbed of a pearl necklace valued at 5,000,000 francs, or $25,000.

Governor E. Lee Trinkle of Virginia suffered a broken arm when he was thrown from a chair aboard the state fish and game boat near Richmond.

THE SNAP

"I'M LOOKING for a three-hour course to fill up my program for next semester," Gregg said to me yesterday. "Do you know any snap course?"

Before I answered him my mind went back to commencement time. We were sitting on the porch talking it over, Frank and I, after the fellows had left. We had been celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of our graduation from college, and we had had three happy days together with the fellows, some of whom we had not seen since the day we parted after our commencement exercises. We had all been struck by the changes which had come to each of us, and naturally each one had swelled with satisfaction whenever some one intimated that he had changed little.

Mac had been in Arizona most of the time, working cruelly hard in the mines; he was bald and seamed and crippled with rheumatism. Pete's hair, which had been a riotous bunch of black curls, was entirely white. Fred, who had been slender and smooth-cheeked, showed a face that was the result of hard struggle and a physique that pulled the scales at twice the amount he could manage when he was a freshman. Ed seemed most like himself; brown-haired, smooth-faced, slender as a boy, he had changed the least of all.

After they were all gone, some way we decided that Fred had gripped us most of all. He had been a wild, untrained, harem-scared fellow, who cared little for God or for his instructors. He had brought himself to the front; he was the head of a big engineering plant; he had great ambitions for the future, and he was managing his men and his boys in a masterly way; best of all, he had conquered himself, and all the wild passions that seemed to rage through him were under his control. His face showed character and conquest and self-control. You could tell by looking at him that he was strong and dependable. He had tried the hard thing and he had made good at it, while Ed was just as he used to be. He had got nowhere; he had no ambition to get anywhere. He had not sacrificed; he had not suffered, and for him there had been no development. And so, as we thought it all over, we decided that the man who had changed the most had done best.

The man who is looking for the snap, for the soft job, is not likely to get anywhere; a passive, unaggressive existence means weakness and stagnation.

"No," I said to Gregg, "I can't think of any snap courses."

Steam-Heated Bird Nest

Steam-heated nests with steam baths are being used by a pair of bluebirds in Yellowstone park, according to reports to the national park service headquarters at Washington. The happy couple have, however, avoided expensive modern plumbing and steam fittings. They have simply taken over one of nature's big steam plants by constructing their cozy home in the nearly extinct Excelsior geyser cone. Every morning they can be seen darting in and out of the steam.

Plants are also using the geyser as a natural greenhouse. Wild strawberries have been found growing not far from the cone two weeks ahead of their usual season.

Safety in Railway Travel

Safety in railway travel depends very largely on microscopic research, which has made possible a number of vital changes in the making of steel rails. The result is that, whereas accidents due to broken rails were once fairly frequent, now they are almost unheard of, the quality of steel of which the rails are made being greatly improved.

A Close Shave
By SIDNEY WILDHOLT
(© by Western Newspaper Union.)

JOHN PETWINE was one of those admirable chaps who stagger through life under the weight of a misnomer. He seldom staggered under much more than that, it is true. Youthful, upright, and reasonably honest, no man could say of John Petwine that he rebelled violently against Volstead's notorious mandate.
One glass was equivalent to many where John Petwine was concerned; two glasses made him silly, and that word means rather the opposite of the empty it used to mean; while more than two glasses John's stomach stubbornly but steadfastly refused to consider. Before the memorable Eighteenth amendment had terrorized half his associates, John Petwine knew from the experience gained in a few such convivial gatherings as New Year's Eve celebrations that more than two glasses of any beverage with a net content exceeding the niggardly legal per cent meant nausea.

John was loath to accept more than one drink on most occasions; he had a profound fear of that state of mind and body in which he knew neither what he was doing nor very well how to do it.

As he sat second to the row of waiting victims in the barber shop this bright morning, John Petwine was doing his mental lovelliest best to put two and two, or even three and one, together to make four.

Something had happened the night before. His memory retained certain all too vivid impressions; brief puffs from a slim cigarette under a white arc light; streaming yellow rays from a doorway flung wide in the hazy darkness of the night; a girl's quick, sharp cry for succor; a swift dash of courageous, chivalric footsteps; scarlet globules of red blood trickling from two dark apertures above two rows of gleaming ivory teeth. John Petwine recalled this bizarre series of mental images only too poignantly. What did they signify? What part had he played? Had he been the chivalrous sinner? Or what—why—when—?

"Next!"
"Shave," said John Petwine succinctly.

"Right," agreed Tony Gragino with a smile. His standard routine joke was even then on the way. "But not too close a shave, eh, Jack?" he added with proper emphasis.

At this critical juncture the door opened and in stepped Fate.

Fate was not an Italian, but no other wise was he remarkably different from Tony Gragino. They greeted each other cordially.

"Heard the latest developments?" asked Fate.

"No," said Tony. "What's happened now?"

"Mac's ready for the hospital and an unknown guy has grabbed Marie!" He literally hurled the words out with considerable vehemence.

The lather-laden razor poised some six inches above John Petwine's left temple.

"You don't say so!" ejaculated Tony. "Sure," Fate went on, "This new guy has butted in and swatted Mac and then disappeared right off the bat and Marie with him. They can't be found anywhere."

"But Marie!" Tony was protesting mournfully, "I was in love with Marie!"

Had it not been for the razor edge pressed so closely against his left cheek, John would have squirmed in his chair. He tensed his muscles to hold himself rigid. It would never do to show his consternation.

"Righto," agreed Fate, "But there'll be something doing by tonight, sure. They're on his trail."

"No suspicion as to who the guy is?" demanded Tony.

"None at all, as far as I can see. But they've got a hunch as to where he is," Fate explained.

Tony was beginning to shave under John's chin. The icy sweat actually trickled. John's morning-after ice-pack was figuratively materializing.

"I hope they get him!" said Tony fervently. "T would serve the but-tinsky right!"

John's heart was in his throat, but he didn't dare swallow just then for fear of jiggling the Adam's apple that was the center of the razor's attention at that precise moment. Why-oh-why had he ever taken to drink?

"That's all?" asked Tony, calming perceptibly.

The jugular vein of his patient was no longer in any immediate danger. The barber was about to get the hot towel.

"Isn't that enough?" retorted Fate "Here's the paper. You can read it for yourself." He handed a copy of the previous night's Record to Tony.

"Thanks," said Tony, taking it. "I'd buy it myself, Jim, but as long as you get it every night and bring it around so I can read—"

"Forget the old gag, Tony, and watch what'll turn up tonight." With which words Fate departed.

With the steaming cloth smothering his perspiring features—the sweat was no longer cold—John Petwine's memory mist cleared entirely away.

"That was a close shave," he murmured to himself, not without some awe, remembering that he had consumed the last of his Christmas brew—a bit over one glass—before reading the latest installment of the newspaper serial of the year, "Marie the Marvelous," while retiring the night before.

Apostle Man of Learning
St. Paul was educated in all the learning of the Jewish doctors of the law, as he states himself. His addresses also show that he had a knowledge of classical literature, particularly the literature of the Greeks. There were many seats of learning in the East in his time. One, that we would call a university, was situated in his native city of Tarsus, in Cilicia.

Marriage Solemnity
The two stages through which marriage has developed are: Marriage by force and marriage by contract. In the latter stage of development there was a solemn surrender of the bride by her guardian in the Anglo-Saxon marriage service. This ceremony is the prauing, and the custom of "giving away the bride" is traced to this solemn surrender.

The Earnest Man
The earnest men are so few in the world that their very earnestness becomes at once the badge of their nobility; and, as men in a crowd instinctively make room for one who seems eager to force his way through it, so mankind everywhere open their ranks to one who rushes zealously toward some object lying beyond them.—Dwight.

"Highgate."

The word "Highgate" is derived from a gate erected over 400 years ago to receive tolls for the bishop of London. At one time all travelers who tarried at Highgate taverns were required to take an oath never to eat brown bread while they could get white.

RAW OYSTER ADMONITION IS SUSTAINED

DR. ROBBINS STILL SAYS BULK
RAW OYSTERS SOLD HERE ARE DANGEROUS.

Agricultural Director Says They Are All Right--Can't Deny Findings of Local Bacteriologist,
Health Commissioner
Robbins Replies.

(United Press.)

Chillicothe, Jan. 17.—Health Commissioner G. E. Robbins today denied that statements issued by Chas. V. Truax, state director of agriculture, embodying a clean bill of health for the "malignant oyster" and a reprimand for "certain food officials who make announcements and warnings without a careful investigation," have any bearing on the local situation.

The statements issued by Truax were based on a survey just completed by Arthur McWilliams, chief of the food and dairy division, who reports the oysters in this section are not to be feared.

"Regardless of the statements of Mr. Truax," Dr. Robbins stated, "the findings of the local bacteriologist can not be denied. Samples of bulk oysters were collected here and in every one colon bacilli, or in other words, human sewage, was found."

"This," he continued, "is evidence of danger of typhoid fever and is sufficient in itself to make it the duty of the local health department to warn the people of this county against using oysters in the raw state. Further examinations by our department of standard select oysters sold in cans have been made and the oysters found to be free from pollution. This, however, means nothing as far as bulk oysters are concerned. The bacteriologist analysis of the bulk samples showed pollution and this means danger of typhoid fever. Therefore, the health department sustains its earlier warnings against the use of the raw oysters.

Mr. Truax further said in his statements that typhoid fever danger does not lie in the oyster itself but in the way shipments are handled and the condition in which they are placed on the market.

Dr. Robbins did not deny this statement, declaring that nothing has been said by the local department in its warning as to how the oysters had become contaminated, but that it was merely a statement of the fact that they are polluted. He said that no effort had been made here to find out the origin of the pollution, the only idea being to protect the public against them.

It was pointed out that there is a big possibility of pollution in improper handling, watering and shipping the bulk oysters. The main idea brought out by Dr. Robbins was that the oysters sold in bulk here had been found polluted and were unfit for use in the raw state. He again warned the public against them.

Teak Wood Highly Priced.
Burma, Siam and the northern provinces of India, together with the Dutch East Indies, contain practically all of the world's teak. Teak is one of the highest quality timbers in the world, ranking next to mahogany, ebony and lignum vitae. It is almost as pliable as cane, almost as hard and tough as metal and is impervious to corrosion and animal life by reason of its natural vegetable oils and low grade acids.

We invite the farmers to take advantage of our special low prices on Rugs, Linoleum and Wallpaper Thursday.

DRIVING YOUR OWN MOTOR IN EUROPE

Washington Man Tells of Novel Adventures.

Washington, D. C.—Seeing England by paddling a Canadian canoe, touring Holland in a canal boat, and, more recently, viewing the continent from the air afford new thrills—and so did the novel adventure of a Washington man who drove his own automobile through London and continental cities.

David Fairchild, famous plant explorer, writes to the National Geographic society of his experiences amid new traffic conditions, ranging from horse dray and pushcart obstructions to a congestion of bicycle riders, as follows:

"Well, I should say the way to have experiences in Europe is to come in your own hand-driven car, leaving every vestige of a professional chauffeur behind, and poke around through the narrow streets and the beautiful highways of these remarkable countries.

Forebodings of Friends.

"It was something of an accident which landed us in Europe with the one hundred and fortieth automobile to cross the Atlantic this year. It was my stubborn disbelief in the information I got, which varied from the statement that it was just as expensive to travel in Europe as it is in America, to the discouraging one that it would be difficult to drive in London because they drive to the left there, and the streets are so congested that a man cannot drive for himself at all.

"The misinformation about motoring in Europe which exists on your side is colossal. If you can interview people and speak a little of the languages of the land you visit, motoring in Europe is the only way by which you can compare it with America on the same plane. If you have a car at home and run about everywhere and come here and depend on taxis, you will not learn any more about the country than you would with taxis in America.

"I have found the garages small and dark affairs, but they cost only from 25 cents to 50 cents a night. I have left tools in the car continually and nothing has disappeared. I have been arrested in London and have a letter from Scotland Yard excusing me—for really, the reasons for the arrest were technical ones, pure and simple.

A "System" for Driving.

"I can find my way all over that town, and my 'system' is as simple as A B C. I get the best map possible and place my son on the front seat and he calls out the streets, and unless we get started wrong, we go right through the narrowest streets and alleys of that great jumbled-up thing called London.

"I wandered in and out of the tiny little streets and got an idea of London which it is impossible to get without a car of your own. London has a terrible traffic problem to face. She must either give up the idea of speeding her commerce and get it up on tires, or broaden scores of streets and run through broad avenues somewhere. "In Holland there are still so few automobiles that there is not yet any problem of traffic. You travel solitary and alone over roads which have cost more than the thoroughfares in America and which were built centuries ago and come after a while to discount every derogatory remark of the inhabitant as regards to the bad roads of his country.

"Years ago a Dutch friend of mine who was in Johns Hopkins as professor predicted that the bicycle would disappear because it was only a fad. Imagine my surprise to find bicycles in his country in such quantities that, like locust swarms, they blocked the wheels of traffic. I never saw so many. Every family must have one for each member of it. And they never try to get out of your way at all, but take up as much room as they want and crowd you off into the ditch, so to speak. But the streets are so narrow and so crooked that it is impossible to go fast, and consequently it is quite as safe driving about as it is to run a machine through a crowded garage.

Frontiers Easy to Pass.

"Before I came I heard that at each boundary I would have difficulties of all sorts to go through with. This is a mistake. It is about as easy to pass a frontier now in a car as it is to back up to a gas tank and take in ten gallons of gas. You show your carnet de voyage, the officer writes out a leaflet and the stub detaches it and bows you through. Not one ugly word or sign of impoliteness have I had shown me either by customs officials, immigration officials, or policemen. Even when I was arrested on Piccadilly by two policemen because my car had a bumper and the bumper concealed the license tag and the policeman didn't understand what the bumper was for. Anyway, I parted with a laugh on their faces when I told them that we had in Washington 104,000 cars with bumpers, and that if I had done what they directed me to do—viz., turn right around in a crowded street—they would have arrested me for that act. The only real quarrel I have with London is that they will not allow you to park cars on the deserted side streets unless you tip someone to watch the car. I think the idea comes down from the days of horse traffic when the horse might run away. There are a few widely separated parking places designated by the police, but utterly useless to one who wants to do any business. And this, mind you, where there are but a small fraction of the cars which we have in our American cities."

World's Match Consumption

The United States uses more than 1,500,000,000 matches made out of wood every year. This is about 37 matches a day for every man, woman and child in the country, based on a population of 110,000,000 or 4,000,000,000 daily. Recent statistics from Europe have placed the per capita consumption there at 14 matches a day. The world output costs $200,000,000 and reaches a total of 4,675,650,000 matches a year.

Conquered Many Tongues

The epithet, the "learned blacksmith," was bestowed upon Elihu Burritt, the American reformer, author and linguist. He began life as a blacksmith about 1827, and worked at that trade for many years, during which time he made himself proficient in ancient and modern languages. It is said that he acquired a mastery of 18 languages and 22 dialects.—Kansas City Star.

Origin of Word "Picnic"

The word "picnic" first came into usage in the Finger lake country of northern New York over a century ago, the residents of the town of Hector first using it. The town had a Sunday school that decided to give an outing by "picking" up their "knickknacks" and going into the woods. From this the word developed.

Cheap Emergency Cement

A cement for filling corner crevices, cracks and rat holes, as well as for repairing wall breaks, can be made cheaply by mixing one part sand with two parts ordinary wheat flour and one part sifted coal ashes, says Popular Science Monthly. These are stirred thoroughly and wet with water to a putty-like consistency. The cement mixture is applied with a trowel.

Strict College Rules

Amherst college as recently as 1825 had a very strict code which the student had to follow. It not only regulated the hours he must study, but likewise his visits to the taverns, shops and stores. He was not allowed to play cards, even for mere enjoyment.

Used in Piano Industry

"Burning in" is a term used to describe the finishing process used on pianos and furniture. A polish is applied and burned in by means of heated devices. This not only serves to give the article a highly polished appearance, but fills up all the holes and pores in the wood.

Glaciers Make Trouble

Mount Robson, the highest peak in the Canadian Rockies, has many glaciers, whose presence has slowly changed the topography of the district until it has become necessary to alter the boundary lines between provinces.

Tests Are Thorough

Besides testing all kinds of timepieces, freezing them and baking them in ovens, our government takes watches apart and breaks them so that they may be repaired by applicants for watchmakers' certificates.

Pencil Work

Little Bessie admitted her sister's call and after entertaining him a few moments went upstairs. Presently she returned, "Sister's nearly ready," she reported, "she's just writing on her eyebrows."

Early French Romance

The romance of "Aucassin and Nicolette," in verse and prose, is considered by critics to be the finest French fiction of the Middle Ages. It was written in the Thirteenth century and is very short.

Too Gloomy

Mrs. Wombat has this to say of Hamlet: "He may be a nice young feller, and he's had trouble. But I wouldn't want him around the house."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

They Always Do

Jud Tunkins says he always suspected that after the first few meals the prodigal son got his nerve back and began to criticize the menu.—Washington Star.

Rain Stops; Buying Better

During our winter time Costa Rica has an unusually heavy rainy season, and a break in it recently heralded the heaviest buying season there.

Value in Proverbs

The study of proverbs may be more instructive and comprehensive than the most elaborate scheme of philosophy.—Motherwell.

On Mental Weakness

A weak mind is like a microscope, which magnifies trifling things, but cannot receive great ones.—Chesterfield.

Particularly Then

The world likes a good loser, particularly if it gets some of his money.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Delicate Hairsprings

The hairspring of a watch is made by drawing steel wire through a hole in a diamond.

Testimony to Truth

Lying is the strongest acknowledgment of the force of truth.—William Hazlitt.

The Way of the Fool.

A fool is one who goes through life with his eyes open, but sees not the things his eyes were intended to see. Instead of peering to one side of trouble, he bumps into it, runs headlong into brambles and gets stuck in mire. And sometimes he walks right into the arms of fortune or happens to be Johnny on the spot when favors are being distributed. But his streaks of luck are so thin as compared with the thickness of his worries and disappointments that they seem to be hardly worth considering.

Egyptian Saw.

The saw appears to be the earliest tool in Egyptian history. It was found first in the form of a notched bronze knife, 5,000 years before the Christian era. There are no dated specimens until the seventh century before the Christian era, when the Assyrians used iron saws.
